2016-2017 Catalog Free - Please take

Dear Friends,

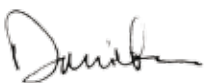

Thanks for picking up our catalog! Our goal is to help you and your family grow as you apply God's Word in your home, and everything you'll find here is meant to support that goal.

The last year has brought many changes for us, as we moved our office and two households to be closer to our church and to each other.

Now we are finding time to finish up some new books (check out the growing Bible Study for Busy Mamas series on the back cover)!

We appreciate your interest in our materials, and we pray our efforts will help you and your children love, know, and follow our Lord Jesus.

May God bless you and your family,

Daniel Forster,

My Not-So-Quiet Time

by Pam Forster

Is it hard for you to find a few minutes in the day to nourish yourself in God's Word? If you have young children, you probably can't even hide in the bathroom to read a few verses, because who says you get to go to the bathroom by yourself when you have little ones?

Getting up earlier than everyone else never seems to work out all that well either. Somehow they know that you're up and that you need their company.

When our guys were little, I sometimes managed the get-up-earlier-than-they-do approach. When that didn't work, I figured God was wanting me to use the disciple-them approach. What better way for our children to understand how important God's Word is to us than to see us studying it — and to join us while we study?

My college art-major days had left me with a drawer full of lovely colored pencils. I started using them to mark different words in the Bible as I read. I also used a fine-point pen to draw simple little pictures that related to what I was reading. I drew these in the margins of my Bible.

The kids were fascinated with what I was doing.

One or two would sit at my side, watching, questioning, asking to help.

"It's like having an experienced, godly parent come alongside you and walk you through the day-to-day of how to train your children in habits of righteousness." - Scott

*"I've never found better help for studying the Bible with my children."
- Amazon reviewer*

"My family and I are forever indebted to the Doorposts folks for being a tool of God's sanctification in our lives. He has primarily used the material in this book to help our sons grow up in Christ. Our culture gives us ideas completely opposite of those of God's holy word, so we love the way the Forsters focus us back to inerrant Scripture and give so many ideas for applying it practically. My husband and I have been so blessed to see the results of this book--and THE book--in our children's lives, and we look forward to using it all our days, first with children and then with grandchildren." - Andrea

The If-Then Chart (Newly revised!)

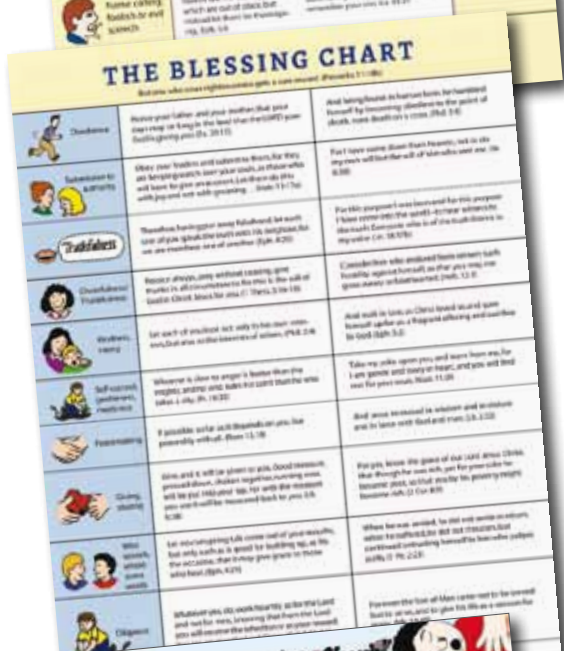

Consistent, Biblical Discipline

The If-Then Chart will help you be more consistent and more biblical as you discipline your children. When they disobey, you will know what to do, and they will know what to expect.

The chart lists common areas of misbehavior (arguing, complaining, hitting, defiance, etc.), along with a Bible verse related to each sin. A second verse illustrates how the gospel helps us overcome sin and receive forgiveness. The last column is blank, for you to write in the agreed-upon consequences for each misbehavior (suggestions are included).

The back of the chart gives suggestions for regularly evaluating and encouraging your children's growth. We believe this offers a needed balance to the If-Then Chart.

*"I can't believe what a gold mine I found!
This is sensible discipline, and now it's easy..."*
- Mother in Washington

*"This book is jam packed with Scripture so it is easy to find the one most relevant and on the level of your child.
I like that it allows me to walk away from the situation feeling good. I didn't just raise my voice and go into a lecture that sounds like a bunch of white noise to my child. Instead, I am able to take the time to sit down with her (letting me cool off too) and read through the scripture together. Yes, she is still disciplined for her behavior, but there is now order to the discipline."*

- Sarah

"It taught me how to discipline children like God does - not always with the rod. It gave me a path forward and hope for the future." - Betty

They were delighted when I would let them highlight a word for me. Or better yet, how about helping color one of my little drawings?

Ones who could read helped me look for specific words to highlight in the text, and those I really trusted even drew tiny pictures in the margin for me once in awhile.

Did I have a “quiet time”?

No.

But I did have children who were excited about the Bible! I had the opportunity to talk to them about what I was reading and to answer their questions. They had the chance to see me taking time in my busy day to read God’s Word.

So, tell me. What’s more important — a quiet time or a not-so-quiet time while God lovingly draws my kids into His Word?

What’s better — not reading my Bible at all because I can’t do it alone, or reading what I can with my children at my side?

God speaks to us through His Word. If we can’t find a time to read the Bible alone, then it might be time to invest in some colored pencils. :-)

Three Ways Our Children May Respond to Discipline that Overlooks the Gospel

by Pam Forster

We need to handle God's Word with care as we discipline our children.

If we only take them to the Bible to show them how God says to live, we've missed our prime opportunity to tell them how they can live that way. They're not going to obey God by trying harder or mustering up more self-discipline, and they're not going to earn God's favor by obeying Him.

Jesus has won God's favor for us. In Him, God's holy requirements are satisfied. If we've placed our faith in Him, we are one with Christ. The Father looks at us and sees His Son. He's pleased with His Son, so He's pleased with us. For the rest of our lives, He will work to make us more like that dear Son who loved us and died for us.

If we only tell our children what God requires, without telling them what God — in His great love — has already done to satisfy those requirements, our children may respond in one of three ways:

They may give up trying. They hear the "rules". They see that they can't possibly, in their own strength, obey them all. They're never going to be perfect, so why even try? They may become sullen or discouraged, or they may openly rebel. This is the child who doesn't seem to care, whose heart only seems to grow harder when you seek to discipline him, or who just becomes indifferent or withdrawn. Much of the rebellion in Christian households can be traced to correction that has been divorced from the hope of the gospel.

They may obey, but only in an attempt to earn our love and approval. They go through the motions. They work harder to do what we're telling them they should do. They want to please us, but they're not obeying out of a heart of love for God.

If they're attempting to win our approval, we may be in for a surprise when the approval of their peers becomes more important than our approval. That's when we will be scratching our heads in wonder as we watch older children suddenly turn away from the godly standards they appeared to embrace in their younger years.

They may obey in an attempt to earn God's approval. They will work hard to obey God, and then believe that He owes them something for their obedience. These children don't obey out of a heart of love and gratitude for what God has already done for them in Christ. Instead, they seek to save themselves through their own good works.

They become proud, judgmental, and self-righteous. They don't need Jesus. They may be able to explain the facts of the gospel. They may profess faith in Jesus. But if they have never come face-to-face with their sin and utter inability to please God, they won't see themselves for who they really are. And if they don't see themselves, they won't see their need for Jesus.

Jesus had things to say to people who put their confidence in their own works:

"Woe to you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! For you are like white-washed tombs, which outwardly appear beautiful, but within are full of dead people's bones and all uncleanness. So you also outwardly appear righteous to others, but within you are full of hypocrisy and lawlessness" (Matt. 23:27-28, ESV).

Many of these compliant, moral children, who look like they are doing so well, will live joyless, self-righteous lives, afraid to ever be open and honest with anyone. Others will eventually see the futility in their striving and suddenly turn away from the faith when they leave home. The whitewashed tomb will open and the dead men's bones will suddenly appear.

Many of these compliant, moral children, who look like they are doing so well, will live joyless, self-righteous lives, afraid to ever be open and honest with anyone.

The Bible is not a rule book. It's a story of redemption and love. God takes what is broken and makes it new. While we take our children to the mirror of God's Word, we need to also take them to the One who has already fixed what they see in that mirror.

All Things Are Ready

A Bride's Complete Christian Wedding Planner

Amy Hayes has coordinated several weddings for our children, as well as many others in our church, and we're excited to offer this planner, her labor of love!

Few wedding planners approach wedding planning from a distinctly Bible-based viewpoint, as Amy does in this book.

This wedding planner is based on three key ideas:

- Planning your wedding doesn't have to take very long (unless you want it to).
- The cost of your wedding should not exceed what you can afford.
